Thanks to all who bought my last book! So happy to have reached the top of the charts! Thanks so much to everyone who took a look at my book! If you'd like to get a feel for my "author's voice" (the speaking voice of the protagonist – Josh – you know, the one who is in a relationship with an abusive ex-boyfriend...), you can listen here! Another friend and I recorded it for our local bar association to use as a recording for their "survivor's support group" for men who have been abused. As of a few days ago, I've reached the top of the Amazon charts in my category for romantic fiction, category romance romance suspense, and category heartwarming. Two of those categories also have subcategories...hmmm. Time to dig in!
Cleveland Cavaliers coach Tyronn Lue said he was "shocked" when he heard that Los Angeles Lakers guard Rajon Rondo had tested positive for a drug banned by the NBA. "I was shocked to hear what he was using," Lue said, according to Brian Windhorst of ESPN. Rondo, who is recovering from surgery to repair the ACL in his right knee, tested positive for the performance-enhancing drug N-Bol after appearing in the second half of the Lakers' 120-104 win over the Atlanta Hawks on Tuesday night. The 34-year-old, who will miss the remainder of the Lakers' 10-game trip, could face a two-game suspension, according to ESPN. "It's not anything I need to have in my head right now," Rondo told reporters, according to Joe Vardon of the Los Angeles Times. "I had a great 20 years in the league and a great career.

And I always prided myself on being clean and working hard to stay that way." Lue, when asked if he considered the possibility that Rondo was trying to hide a legitimate injury, said, "I don't know if that's the case, but it's unfortunate." Rondo suffered the injury after the Lakers forward LeBron James went over his back near midcourt with about two minutes left. James took several steps to catch his balance before falling and finally got up to walk to the locker room. He returned with four minutes remaining in the third quarter.
