1. Field of the Invention This invention relates to a data transmission method and system of high reliability of the type employing an Automatic Repeat reQuest (ARQ) scheme. 2. Description of the Related Art Such high reliability data transmission system can be used for example for systems which carry out bi-directional data transmission and a method for its realization which provides a number of advantages over conventional systems has been proposed in U.S. Pat. No. 4,401,957. According to this patent, as shown in FIG. 1, in a system of high reliability which employs an automatic repeat request (ARQ) scheme, the transmission of data is carried out at a constant speed of V to ensure that the arrival of data at the receiver matches the arrival of the data at the transmitter. In this manner, the reliability of the system is enhanced, since the absence of the data transmitted by the transmitter is determined at the receiver by the time at which the transmitted data are not received, i.e., time  $t_{sub.0}$ , as shown in FIG. 2. The use of a high speed clock for data transmission ensures that the time  $t_{sub.0}$  is at a time when data can be discarded if it is determined that there has been a fault in the system. FIG. 1 shows a system in which data of one clock cycle duration are transmitted to the receiver and as the data are transmitted they are latched by a latch 16. Data are then read from the latch 16 and supplied to a binary data receiver 5 at a time which is one clock cycle later. In order to provide a continuous data stream, the first data of a data stream are transmitted at a time when there is no data from the latch 16 present on the data bus and hence the input of data to the receiver is uninterrupted. After the first data have been transmitted, the latch 16 can latch data from the data bus which are indicative of the end of the data stream. A problem with such a system
