Does anyone know of a software that I can use to log the activity of my TEW-424UB Wireless USB Radio on my Ubuntu 14.04.3 LTS with the latest (see bottom of this post) firmware installed? I haven't found a log file on the radio to read directly. Perhaps there is a way to have a pipe capture the (log) syslog's output to a file so I can read the contents? I have an Belkin WN624BUP USB Adapter for Ethernet. When I plug in the Adapter via USB, the adapter shows as a storage device, I did a "force mount" and the 'storage-sr0' comes up. I believe I installed the firmware via wifi-fw-updater. During installation I selected "/dev/ttyACM0" and "/dev/ttyUSB0". After that the wn624BU usb Ethernet Adapter came up. I was able to connect and download the firmware. Have installed OpenWRT on the Belkin WN624BUP network adapter. I am able to get the adapter to connect to the Internet, I can ping sites, download updates etc. I then went and installed OpenWRT on the Belkin wifi-firmware updater. The firmware was installed but the network adapter did not show up when I plugged it into my Windows 10 laptop. Plugging in my wifi network adapter does not show the network adapter either but I can connect to the internet on the laptop and download and install the firmware. 09e8f5149f
