KeyGenius is an easy to use software utility designed to decrypt iTunes backup passwords or remove backup encryption settings from an iPhone, iPad or iPod. The software will try to decrypt a password using three different methods: Dictionary Attack, Brute-

Force with Mask Attack and Brute-Force Attack. When using Dictionary Attack, the program will show you suggested words it has found and asks you to confirm them. If you answer "Yes", the program will search through a database of words and try them one by one. When using Brute-Force Attack, the program will try a large list of words using one letter, then two letters and then a three letter word. If a match is found, the program will show you the matched letter and word. If there is a match, the program will try the first letter of the password, the second letter of the password, the third letter of the password and the last two letters of the password. If the program doesn't find a match after trying all of the letters, it will move to the next method. The program will continue the process until the correct password is found. If no correct password is found, the program will show you the details of the failed attempts and ask you if you want to continue. When using Brute-Force Attack with a Mask Attack, the program will use a mask to try to bypass a password. The mask is a list of letters with the correct position as the letter in the password. If the letter in the password is in the mask, the program will try the mask. If it finds a match, the program will show you the matched letters and the mask. If a match is found, the program will try the first letter of the password, the second letter of the password, the third letter of the password and the last two letters of the password. If the program doesn't find a match after trying all of the letters, it will move to the next method. If you are using the KeyGenius program, it will stop after a few attempts. If you are using the program, you can choose to have it stop after several attempts or after a few seconds. You can choose the type of attack, whether to use a mask or not, how many attempts it will make and whether you want to use Brute-Force Attack or not. If the program doesn't find a match, you can set a code that will stop the program and remove the password. When you connect your device, you can
