This is contrasted with the recording of a soundtrack album, in which the recording is only of the sound generated by the performance. Cast albums are typically available to the public at least one year after the end of the show's original run, often considerably longer. Produced by the cast members of the original production (often the director and/or the playwright), a cast album typically contains lyrics, background vocals, and other music performed by the cast members. They are sometimes accompanied by still images and/or pre-recorded video. Depending on the record label, the album may be a stand-alone release, or it may be sold along with the movie, play, or other original production
